

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

THE PRESS AN ALLY OF PEACE.

MADAME DE STAEL lived and died in the belief that revolutions are effected, and the civilized world governed, by a succession of clever pamphlets. Such pamphlets are ably conducted newspapers ; and three newspapers in France are said to have effected the Revolution of July, 1830.

Here is encouragement for the cause of peace. An able, judicious editor seldom fails of bringing his constant readers into sympathy with himself ; and, should the conductors of all the fifty religious newspapers in our country imbibe the pacific spirit and principles of the gospel, how surely, speedily, and easily, would they leaven the whole religious community. Most of them are now friendly to our cause ; and there is much reason to expect they will all, at no very distant period, take hold of this great evangelical subject, as they did of the temperance reform, and thus hasten it onward to certain and glorious triumphs.

Still more hope is there from the wide prevalence of our language : "The English language is now spoken by a population amounting to 44,442,000, viz., in Europe, 26,700,000 ; in Africa, 240,000 ; in Australasia, 100,000 ; in the United States, 15,000,000 ; British America, 1,350,000 ; in West Indies, 840,000 ; in South America, 112,000 ; Newfoundland, 80,000 ; Texas, 20,000. And it is spoken partially in Europe, Hindostan, &c.c., and the allied provinces, by 150,000. The inhabitants who thus talk, are spread over an extent of territory amounting to 9,415,393 square miles, 2,257,300 of which form the little plat of the United States."

This diffusion of our language through the four quarters of the globe, gives the friends of peace peculiar facilities for disseminating their principles, and leavening the entire mass of human minds. The Solemn Review, Worcester's first effort in the cause of peace, has already visited every continent, and not a few isles of the ocean ; and through English and American missionaries, we can now gain access for our views more or less to nearly every considerable nation and tribe on earth.

I abominate war as unchristian. I hold it the greatest of human crimes. I deem it to include all others—violence, blood, rapine, fraud, every thing which can deform the character, alter the nature, and debase the name of man.—LORD BROUGHAM.